ROOFER SKATING CLAIMS VICTIM

Newborn Youth Dies as Result of Injuries—Big Shipments of Liqueur.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Newborn, N. C., April 27.—The roller skate claim, its first victim here to-day, when Ellis Meekins, the seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Meekins, who reside at 3 1/2 New South Street, died from injuries received from a fall while he was skating on Pollock Street last Sunday night. The young man, in company with several companions, was skating, and some one tripped him, and he fell, striking his head on the sidewalk. Not seeing this obstruction, Meekins went down the sidewalk at a pretty fast clip, and when his skates struck it, he was thrown to the pavement with frightful force, and his hip and three ribs were broken. He was taken to his home and medical attention rendered, but he did not rally, and yesterday morning of the brain set in, and death occurred a few hours later.

Several accidents have occurred lately to roller skaters, but this is the first that has had a fatal culmination. However, Ernest B. Leiders, a New York fish dealer, has created quite a sensation among the dealers of this city by declaring that the fish dealers are combined together and that there is a "trust." Mr. Leiders claims that he wants to start a new industry and ship fish to the New York market. However, he claims that it will be impossible for him to procure the herring which are used as bait for this species of fish, because the fish dealers have conspired together to prevent an outsider coming to this city to start business and that they have it in their power to keep him out. Mr. Leiders has been very bitter in his denunciation of him. Mr. Leiders says he will remain in Newborn and endeavor to start the enterprise he intended.

Big shipments of liquor from Norfolk and Richmond continue to pour into Newborn on every train from the north, and the express people are jubilant over the large amount of business which they are doing. The market for whiskey arrives on an afternoon train, and it is not an unusual thing to see from 200 to 400 four-quart packages unloaded on one of the big trucks which the express company uses in hauling the wet goods to the downtown office. It is estimated that 150 express and postal money orders are sent to Virginia from this city every day in the week in payment for whiskey. This condition has existed only since the search and seizure act, and the Webb bill went into effect.

Charles Spencer, colored, is being held in jail in this city without bond for murder on last Christmas night of a colored woman named Alice Hargett. Spencer made his escape at that time but was located and captured at Mayville several days ago. Constable T. J. Hawkins, of that place. The crime was a revolting one in every detail. The woman was literally beaten to a pulp. Her assailant not only cut her face almost to pieces, inflicted injuries all over her body. Craven County is preparing to have a grand jury in the county put in the best possible condition. R. E. Snowden, of Snowden, N. C., who was recently appointed road supervisor and highway engineer, has just returned to the city from a trip of inspection over the roads, and he found the majority of them in bad condition. At his suggestion the commissioners have ordered the road-building machinery, and as soon as this arrives the work of repairing the roads will be taken up. The convicts will be used in this work, and movable camps have been secured for them, so that it will not be necessary to return with them to their quarters at the county home after each day's work. Mr. Snowden says that the fault with the roads in this section is that they are not properly drained; that if this was done in a scientific manner the roads would remain in good condition for many years.

Carroll Collins, the thirteen-year-old son of W. Collins, of Parkside, broke his arm Wednesday while playing ball. Three months ago he fractured the same arm, in the same place, by a fall from a bicycle.

Two children of Calhoun Thornton, of Hopeton, a little girl, aged four and a boy of seven years were playing in a room in which there was a loaded gun. Their mother, who was in an adjoining room upon hearing the report of a gun, rushed in. She found her little girl on the floor dead. The little boy has never been able to give a coherent account of the accident. The little girl was buried in the Parkside Cemetery.

Miss Malda Marsh, of Onley, was called to Reedville by the death of her sister, Mrs. Adonia Haynes.

James Bonnell, who struck John W. White over the head with a piece of wood in self-defense, was exonerated by the coroner's jury.

White, with his family, was living with Bonnell, who was his son-in-law. A dispute arose between Bonnell and one of White's sons, resulting in a fight. White, siding with his son, was drawn into the fracas. He was struck on the head but did not consider that he was seriously hurt. He walked to the store of T. H. Bennett, in Hack's Neck, told of the fight, fell unconscious and died.

LORD WEARDALE NOW ON THIS SIDE OF OCEAN

He Is Well Known Here Under Name of Philip Stanhope.

BY LA MARQUE DE FONTENAY.
LORD WEARDALE and his nephew, the Earl of Stanhope, who head the delegation of members of the international conference for the celebration of the centenary of the treaty of Ghent, and of the hundred years of peace among English-speaking peoples, now on its way across the Atlantic, before sailing on Friday last with their fellow commissioners by King George at Buckingham Palace.

Lord Weardale is no stranger on this side of the ocean, where he is more widely known by the name of Philip Stanhope, which he bore prior to his elevation to the peerage, some seven years ago. He is a man of letters, who created a good deal of astonishment at the time. For as an advanced Radical in the lower chamber of the national legislature, he had frequently advocated the policy of sweeping out of existence the House of Lords, and everything connected therewith. He is a civil engineer by profession, and a politician by inclination, his views on public questions being diametrically opposed to those of most other members of the Stanhope family, though in keeping with those of certain of his ancestors, notably his great-grandfather, the third Earl of Stanhope. The latter, an avowed Republican, had been a member of the House of Commons, and at one time an officer of the Liverpool militia, married the daughter of Lord Chatham, the elder Pitt, and of this union was born the brilliant and eccentric Lady Hester Stanhope, who kept house for her uncle, William Pitt the Premier, until his death, was the fiancée of General Sir John Moore, of Cornamurphy, and who died in such a mysterious fashion in Palestine as the wife of an Arab sheikh.

After the death of Lady Hester's mother, the third Earl Stanhope married again, and Lord Weardale, as well as his nephew, the present Earl of Stanhope, are the lineal descendants of this second marriage. The fourth Earl Stanhope was the father of the late Duke of Devonshire, and the grandfather, therefore, of Lord Rosebery.

Lord Weardale is married to a daughter of the Russian Count Cassine, the wife of the late Count Alexis Constantinovich Tolstoy. Until Philip Stanhope became Lord Weardale she insisted upon retaining her title of Countess Tolstoy, which led to some domestic squabbles when they were traveling in unopinionated parts of the world, the shocked inkeepers requiring evidence of the fact that they were actually married, owing to their being registered under different names.

Lord Weardale's longest stay in this country was at the time of the World's Fair at St. Louis, when he was the leader of the English delegation to the International Parliamentary Congress held there. There are no less than four representatives of the historic family of Stanhope in the House of Lords, namely, Lord Weardale, and the Earls of Stanhope, of Harrington and of Chesterfield.

Canon Keble's writings of the times of Queen Elizabeth, mention the Stanhope family as deriving its name from Stanhope, in the County of Durham. The first peerage granted to the family was the Marquis of Chesterfield, created in 1825 in favor of Sir Philip Stanhope. It was his great-grandson whose "Letters" have caused him to be generally spoken of as "the celebrated Lord Chesterfield." A grandson of the first Lord Chesterfield was created first Earl of Stanhope for his services in war—he was the general who captured Mahon, in the island of Minorca, and was for a number of years Prime Minister.

Lord Weardale's father was famous as a historian, and while still Lord Stanhope was a "History of England," which remained for many years a standard work. He was an intimate friend of Macaulay, who often stayed with him at Chenevise, the Stanhope ancestral home, and a grand old place, full of relics of past days, a standard work. He was an intimate friend of Macaulay, who often stayed with him at Chenevise, the Stanhope ancestral home, and a grand old place, full of relics of past days, a standard work.

The present Earl is thirty-two years of age, still unmarried, and served as an officer of the Grenadier Guards during the war in South Africa. He has inherited none of the pronounced prejudices of his father, the sixth Earl, against the United States. The late Lord Stanhope gave liberal expression to his unbiassed sentiments for everything American, by his vigorous opposition to the action of the English government in turning over to the United States the log of the Mayflower. Indeed, he actually went to the length of moving in the House of Lords a petition to the Queen to put a stop to this piece of international courtesy; a motion which was denied.

Among the other members of the delegation headed by Lord Weardale, is Captain the Hon. Arthur Lawley, a member of the present Lord Weardale's family, and who was in the mission in King Edward's own regiment, the Tenth Hussars, in which he served with the late Duke of Clarence, to become the private secretary of the late Duke of Devonshire, and who he filled for several years. He thereupon was appointed in turn administrator of Matabeleland, Governor of the Transvaal, and Lieutenant-Governor of the Transvaal. He completed a six-year term as Governor of Madras, where he enjoyed a salary of $60,000 a year with allowances of such magnitude as to place him in the city of Madras and in the highlands of the presidency, maintained for him by the government. He was married to a daughter of the late Sir John Lubbock, and his sister, therefore, of Sir John Lubbock, a baronet. Sir Arthur is indebted for his title to his Grand Cross of the Order of the Indian Empire.

Still another member of the delegation, and a very important one, is the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Maxwell, who is one of King George's Privy Counsellors. He is a Scotchman, and a very capable man, possessor of a noble baronetcy and some very fine estates in Scotland. The Maxwells, of whom Sir Herbert is the chief, are among the oldest families in Scotland, and are descended from Macchius, a noble of Norwegian descent at the court of David I. of Scotland. He received from the monarch a grant of lands on the Tweed, and from Macchius, one of them, Sir John, particularly distinguished himself at the battle of Otterburn, where according to the Chronicle of England, his contemporary, he captured Sir Ralph Percy, a noble and sister of that famous Percy who is now attached to the British embassy at Washington.

Sir Herbert is president of the Society of Antiquaries in London, sat for a number of years in the House of Commons. He is the author of "The Story of a Naturalist," which for so many years has been a popular feature in William Waldorf Astor's Pall Mall Gazette, and has written on almost as many subjects as there are a wide range of knowledge as his friend, the late Andrew Lang.

Monreith, his place in the County of Wigton, comprises some 20,000 acres with a stately mansion, standing in beautiful park, the latter framed by a grand old park. He is a member of that curious sect popularly known as the Irvingites, but which is itself the Catholic Apostolic Church, and as usual in the houses of the members of this particular denomination, a vacant chair is always left at table at each meal, for the coming of the Lord. While possessed of so facile a pen, Sir Herbert is not a graceful or a fluent speaker. Indeed, the first time he rose to address the House of Commons, in his halting fashion, an audible gasp was made from one of the back benches. "The man looks as if he would not be the worse for a stiff brandy and some water."

'WETS' DETERMINE TO CONTINUE FIGHT

Will Find Out Whether Recent Local Option Election Is Constitutional.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Danville, Va., April 27.—An ordinance has been passed by the Board of Aldermen forbidding the issuing of licenses for the sale of ardent spirits from the end of this month until the first of May, 1915, the content to the recent local option election still holds good, and the "wets" intend to fight the matter and find out once and for all whether an election in the city of Danville in which only four of the city wards were allowed to participate is really constitutional. The ordinance will go before the Common Council at its next regular monthly meeting, and it is generally understood that it will be passed unanimously, as it was by the Board of Aldermen.

An amusing incident occurred here on Friday morning last in a local store, when police detectives who happened to be in the store at the time arrested and carried to the courthouse a woman whom the officers claimed was a man masquerading as a woman. It seems that the woman, who was wearing a large hat, which covered a wealth of hair, which gave the wearer an extremely masculine appearance. A crowd soon surrounded the unfortunate young woman, and the officers, after questioning her and receiving answers which failed to satisfy them, took the woman before the Mayor, who, after questioning her, allowed her to go free.

Much interest is being displayed here in musical circles over the organ recital which is to be given in the Presbyterian Church to-morrow night by Professor Benjamin J. Potter, the well-known organist of Richmond. The recently installed organ in this handsome church is by far the best one in the city, and music-lovers have signified their intention of turning out in full force to hear the turning player.

John K. Cooper, a man over seventy years of age, was arrested here on Saturday afternoon on a warrant sworn out by a man named Stephen Holland, of Henry County, charging the old man with forging his name to a note of small denomination in 1910. He is being held here pending the arrival of an officer from Martinsville, who will take him to the Henry County seat for trial.

The trial of the case of W. F. Taylor vs. the Illinois Surety Company, instituted on Saturday for the recovery of $700 damages, which Taylor claims he sustained by the Illinois Surety Company's failing to pay him the money advanced for the arrest of former Governor Taylor, will probably bring to light several facts hitherto unknown by the public. John Cook, clerk of the Corporation Court, to whom Governor Taylor's name was attached, has stated that he will pay the reward, has freely stated that he gave the information last August, which, it is said, led to the arrest of the missing man largely through speculation. Mr. Cook, knowing that Taylor had a love for the Republican republic, wired the Illinois Surety Company that Taylor would be found there, and it so transpired. Mr. Taylor, who is a telegraph operator at the Postal Telegraph office, has never declared by what means he came into possession of the fact that Taylor was in the South, which will come up next September, these facts will be revealed.
